Here modernity is a rumour.

The eucalypts, untidy
as logic.

Anarchic birds and their noise, both wanting to be somewhere else.

The sun, bold atheist,
making everything
seem as it is.

Somewhere there is water, secrecy
made audible.

The bliss of long grass inhabited by breeze.

Rocks and their values.

Somewhere—silent in its burrow—hides
the wombat of pain.

The kids are upstairs
watching Border Patrol, while the guests
take in the views,
and Real Estate moves
the party along nicely.

(ii) American

Fuck you, America,
with your stars and stripes
and your hand guns for children.
Now every word
my daughter says is,
like, dripping with you.

(iii) República

The people have been busy for the festival.
They watch as the

police sit and eat,
their hand cuffs
glinting in the sun.

Mystic number always to hand, priming mathematicians with its arcane properties:
an under-valued age; the most beautiful of glyphs—a flat roof protecting a belly, pregnant with meaning,

It collects oceans, senses, and week days.
We mouth its vowels, play its consonant harmony.
Outside, in the dog’s bowl, are five pieces of dried food. Two magpies share them—while the dog sleeps nearby—and sing their pentatonic praise.

Her last work (1996) was The Black Sequin Dress commissioned for the Adelaide Festival; it continued her concern with the psychic landscape through repeatedly examining the moment of a woman's entering a nightclub and falling down. [See the Credit note at the end of this article.] But the paintings help me to address location; and it always feels that in some way location is a landscape of the psyche, so its an internal landscape but its got to have a groundedness about it. The spaces and objects of landscape design are stored temporally in the mind; they cannot be used by visitors. In this paper, the importance of cognitive psychology in landscape design is examined, and the concepts of imageability and mental maps are discussed. Psyche was a princess renowned for her beauty. As a result of the jealousy of his mother, Venus (Aphrodite), Psyche comes to the notice of the god Cupid who duly falls in love with the mortal princess. Cupid asks Zephyrus to transport Psyche to his palace and there he visits her at the dead of night, beguiling her with tenderness and charm but commanding her never to look on his face.
