Finally, welfare policy needs to address the causes of poverty, not merely the symptoms. Among families with children, the collapse of marriage and erosion of the work ethic are the principal long-term causes of poverty. Abstract: The Census Bureau’s annual poverty report presents a misleading picture of poverty in the United States. Few of the 46.2 million people identified by the Census Bureau as being in poverty are what most Americans would consider poor—lacking nutritious food, adequate warm housing, or clothing. Exaggerating the extent and severity of hardships will not benefit society, the taxpayers, or the poor. Higher education was designed for men in colonial America. Since the 1800s women’s positions and opportunities in the educational sphere have increased. Since the late 1970s and early 1980s, women have surpassed men in number of bachelor’s degrees and master’s degrees conferred annually in the United States and women have continuously been the growing majority ever since, making men a continuously shrinking minority to earn either degrees. The same asymmetry has occurred with Doctorate degrees since British education emasculates us to develop fully the abilities of individuals, for their own benefit and of society as a whole. Compulsory schooling takes place between the ages of 5 and 16, but some pupils remain at school for 2 years more, to prepare for further higher education. Post school education is organized flexibly, to provide a wide range of opportunities for academic and vocational education and to continue studying throughout life. Administration of state schools is decentralised. The work is best upon the pupils interests as far as possible. The junior stage extensive over four years. Children have set.

The house of representatives. The United States and the United Kingdom: Past and Present. authors: N.Kryazheva V.Oleinik Zh.Khramushina. PREFACE. This book attempts to present a picture of the British country and the United States of America as they are at the present period. The main objective is to convey information about political, social and cultural life in the above mentioned countries. History is kept to a minimum. Believing that the future of the United States lay in the West, Jefferson sent his diplomats to Paris with an offer to buy the Louisiana Territory lying to the west of the Mississippi River which belonged to France. Napoleon, who needed a lot of money for waging his wars, agreed to sell Louisiana for 15 million dollars. The Louisiana Purchase doubled the size of the United States and extended its boundaries beyond the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains. It was also Jefferson's idea to send the Lewis and Clark expedition to the Pacific. In the 1700's Philadelphia, like New York and Boston, was one of the three largest and most modern cities in the colonies. One of the leading citizens of Philadelphia was Benjamin Franklin. Franklin was a man of amazing energy and curiosity.
Governments across America already used the pandemic, and the media-stoked panic around the pandemic particularly, to limit, restrict or remove First Amendment freedoms of speech and free association, with officials complaining about the potential restraints the freedom of religion imposed upon them. Others denied or declared the right to deny Second Amendment rights of gun purchase for personal safety (at a time governments are issuing no-arrest and no-detention orders for a wide range of crimes in their community while publicly freeing inmates from jails and prisons). Right to a trial by jury, as jury trials themselves get suspended around the country in the nation’s quieted courts and fear-muted public. The real pandemic threat is here. Preview “Thoughts Upon Female Education by Benjamin Rush. "To help manage the national government, monarchs hired loyal civil servants typically born in the towns and educated at local universities. Their perspectives were national, not regional. The state, in the person of the monarch, now had sovereignty, or the utmost authority in decision making and in maintaining order. Everyone, including the nobles, was subordinate to that authority. With sovereignty, the monarch now had the right to make laws for the entire nation and all its people." How did the establishment of nations expand the power and reach of government? Everything a g... He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States. Social class is sometimes presented as a description of how members of the society have sorted themselves along a continuum of positions varying in importance, influence, prestige, and compensation. In these models, certain occupations are considered to be desirable and influential, while others are considered to be menial, repetitive, and unpleasant. (In some cases, non-occupational roles such as a parent or volunteer mentor, are also considered.[5]) Generally, the higher the ranking on such a scale, the higher the skill and education levels required to perform it.[6] Education. Main article: Educational attainment in the United States. All government in the United States is «of, by and for the people». Members of Congress, the President, state officials and those who govern counties and cities are elected by popular vote. The President names the heads of federal departments while judges are either elected directly by the people or appointed by elected officials. The supreme law of the land is the US Constitution. Before this country officially became the United States of America, there was a need for public education. When the first settlers created the Massachusetts Bay Colony, the governing General Court created the initial education system, which consisted of public and Latin schools designed to teach children Puritan values and how to read the Bible.[7] The federal government also plays an important role, providing information on how to improve the state of public education for all states, through the latest education data and research. Challenging educational issues may also be addressed at the federal level, if state departments of education are unable to find a solution on their own. Federal programs like the Free Lunch program are also offered to schools across the country.

The United States is divided into eleven judicial circuits, each one being served with a Federal Court of Appeals. There are about ninety district courts in different parts of the United States. The district courts are the lowest ones in the Federal court system. Most of the criminal and civil cases are tried by these courts. 9. Each state has a constitution similar to the Constitution of the entire nation, all the power in each state being divided into executive, legislative and judicial. The head of each state is the governor of the state. 10. Each state has its own system of courts similar to that of the Federal courts. Not one word in the Constitution about plagues or pandemics to exempt the government from any of our Bill of Rights. Why do our current courts allow it? Because the public is asleep at the wheel.
