Diana's Marriage to Charles had many problems. She and Charles separated in 1992 and were divorced in 1996. They shared custody of their children. After the divorce, Diana decided to concentrate on just six charities. She raised a great deal of money for causes like AIDS and cancer and made people aware of things like the dangers of landmines. Many people were still interested in her personal life and photographers followed her wherever she went. People from around the world mourned her death. They sent nearly $150 million to the Diana, Princess of Wales Fund, which was set up in her honor. More than a million people lined up to watch her funeral procession pass by on September 6, 1997.