So early Indian philosophy is much foggier to us than is early Western philosophy. What, then, shall be our strategy? We will examine each major school of ancient Indian philosophy, and we will not speculate much about who influenced whom or when certain developments occurred. Indians distinguish two classes of Indian philosophies: astika and nastika. The astika systems respect the Vedas to some degree. They are: Sankhya, Yoga, Vedanta, Mimamsa, Nyaya, and Vaisheshika. Indian philosophy refers to philosophical traditions which developed in the Indian subcontinent. Modern scholars generally divide the field between "Hindu Philosophy" (also known as "Vedic Philosophy") and non-Hindu traditions such as Buddhist Philosophy and Jain Philosophy. This division is generally derived from traditional Indian classifications. There are numerous different Indian schools of thought, all of which debated and influenced each other throughout Indian history. Most Indian Its main contribution to Indian philosophy was its development of logic (the name of the system means "method" or "rule"). Because its categories were similar to those of Vaiśeṣika, the two became combined into a single hyphenated school, Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika. The name Vaiśeṣika means "difference" or "differentiation." Indian philosophy refers to philosophical traditions of the Indian subcontinent. A traditional classification divides Astika (orthodox) and Nāstika (heterodox) schools of philosophy, depending on one of three alternate criteria: whether it believes the Vedas as a valid source of knowledge; whether the school believes in the premises of Brahman and Atman; and whether the school believes in afterlife and Devas.

Previous (Indian inscriptions). Next (Indian reservation). The term Indian philosophy may refer to any of several traditions of philosophical thought that originated in India. Indian philosophy has a longer history of continuous development than any other philosophical tradition, and philosophy encompasses a wide variety of schools and systems. Almost every school of Indian philosophy is associated with a religious sect, including the six orthodox (astika) schools (darshanas) of Hinduism, Nyaya...
